Dr. Chan holds a Ph.D. in Advanced Social and International Studies from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, University of Tokyo. She was a Postdoctoral Fellow of JSPS affiliated with the Graduate School of Political Science, Waseda University. From 2018 to 2023, her academic work focused on “the political thought of (non)territorialization,” analyzing the transformation of political subjectification of people under ‘the episteme prompted by the interplay of social question and imperial question’ between 1896 and 1924 in Japan and Taiwan.

Dr. Chan’s current works examine the transformation of social questions against the backdrop of the Rice Riots of 1918 under the title of “Rice Crisis and the Question of Fascism 1927-1937”. It analyzes the discourses amongst Japanese Marxists, state socialists, and anarchists, emphasizing the dynamics of territorialization and political subjectification in relation to food insecurity, natural disasters, agricultural depression and social movements.

Her publication can be found in edited volumes Empire and Civilization II: Plural Imaginaries of World Order (from the West to Asia), as well as journals including Journal of Social Sciences and Philosophy, Journal of Northeast Asian History, Router: A Journal of Cultural Studies.
